

Art & Real Estate

Cesar Galicia

August 25, 2011 · by justinchristopher · in Cesar Galicia ·

(<https://artandrealstate.wordpress.com/wp-content/uploads/2011/08/cesar.jpg>)

The Art In Real Estate

(<http://www.artandrealestate.wordpress.com>) would like to thank Spanish artist and friend Cesar Galicia (<http://www.cesargalicia.com/>) for the use of his work, Paisaje de Madrid con estructura, 2003 37 x 65 cm as our official image. Cesar created his own style of hyperrealism in the pursuit of the perfect painting. That being said with a nod to pop art Cesar's work is whimsical, reminiscent of the past and most importantly fun. Cesar begins to build his image on an architectural grid that he leaves in the finished work, this has become his trademark. "I leave the lines for the viewer to see, it's a part of the painting." Although viewing these works on his website is a joy it is also akin to looking at a photo of the Grand Canyon. Hyperrealism is a progression of photorealism and is in fact 17 times more realistic than any image. In essence Cesar accomplishes with his painting what no lens, even in this digital age can. To see Cesar's work drop by Forum Gallery (<http://forumgallery.com/>) in Manhattan, NY.

– Justin Christopher

(http://www.bondnewyork.com/nyc_real_estate_agent_1950.htm).

Blog at WordPress.com.